

NEWS (Civic Trust Auckland archive)

August 2009

2	More community projects planned for city thanks to additional $500,000 in funding (City Scene)
3	Ruling puts Puketutu island sewerage landfill up creek (New Zealand Herald Brian Rudman)
3	Bigger trucks, bigger loads and bigger uncertainties (New Zealand Herald Tim Gavin director of public policy at the institution of professional engineers)
4	New Britomart Hotel proposal still over the limit (New Zealand Herald Bernard Orsman)
4	Environment Court rules for new Park at Barrack Road in place of proposed retirement village (New Zealand Herald Eloise Gibson)
6	Auckland borrowing to buy ageing British cast off diesel fleet while negotiating for electrification (New Zealand Herald John Landrigan)
12	Heritage policy only skin deep say critics (New Zealand Herald Anne Gibson)
12	Temporary World Cup Bridge to cost $2 million at viaduct Harbour (New Zealand Herald Bernard Orsman)
13	Planning change threat to old city suburban shopping centres such as Kingsland, Mt Eden and Parnell (the Aucklander Joseph Barratt)
13	Country oblivious to the next oil shock (New Zealand Herald Denis Tegg)
13	ARC cool on hybrid Waterview link plan (New Zealand Herald Matthew Dearnaley)
14	Tram rides on waterfront options list (New Zealand Herald Matthew Dearnaley)
14	Historic 1931 Bentley buildings in Grafton saved, subject to appeal (New Zealand Herald Alanah May Eriksen) see also "win for people power" East and Bays Courier August 19, by Melanie Verran.
17	We need a waterfront to make citizens proud-and alternative to the ports of Auckland's reclamation plans (New Zealand Herald Greg McKeown, previous Auckland City Council and member of the regional land transport committee)
18	Historic Alberton mention gets $355,000 makeover (New Zealand Herald Anne Gibson)
19	Euro style village plans at Waimauku turned down (New Zealand Herald Anne Gibson)
19	$10.3 million to buy viaduct basin land city will own any way (New Zealand Herald Bernard Orsman)
21	Resource bill better for all the wrangling (New Zealand Herald editorial)
21	Regions say no to government plan for big trucks (New Zealand Herald Matthew Dearnaley)
22	Historic Carlton building in Newmarket for sale (New Zealand Herald Colin Taylor) The Carlton club hotel cost £4700 in 1887. First known as the Jubilee hotel to commemorate Queen Victoria's 50th Jubilee that year, it was designed by Edward Mahoney and Son, the firm which designed the Custom House. The builder was William Edgerley and it was constructed for William J. Suiter a brewer, who was also Newmarket's first Mayor.
22	Historic Portland building in Kingsland for sale (New Zealand Herald Colin Taylor) Portland building was designed by architect Arthur H. White and Constructed in 1914. The name Portland is thought to derive from the ship that brought the Page family from England in 1864.
23	$406 million Victoria Park tunnel project starts this October (City Scene)
24	New Penrose Station brings Onehunga trains closer (New Zealand Herald Matthew Dearnaley)
24	Auckland's new rail system will not be cheap (New Zealand Herald Rudmans city)
25	Coastal playground area to be carved from super city (New Zealand Herald Bernard Orsman)

26	Government to Coy on coastal carve up says Mike lee (New Zealand Herald Bernard Orsman)
27	CBT Tunnel on track despite train doubts (New Zealand Herald Matthew Dearnaley)
27	Prime Minister Key stays silent on Rodney Carve-up-seven regional parks at risk (New Zealand Herald Bernard Orsman)
27	Historic orphanage in Grey Lynn an A-grade eyesore (New Zealand Herald asked Phoebe) Carlisle house was built in Richmond road in 1866 as the first purpose-built orphanage in Auckland for boys of good character, with trust money provided by Sir John Logan Campbell. The building was later used as a live in training institute for boys. It was purchased by a Tongan church group about 1980.
27	Party central-makeover for wharf must not be rushed (New Zealand Herald editorial)
31	Super city boundaries now political football (New Zealand Herald Rudmans city)
31	Carve up of Rodney would be a disaster (New Zealand Herald Gary Taylor chairman of the environmental defence society)